Highlight of the Second Annual Father and Son Banquet

of Boy Scout Troop 315 and dances by Chief Thunderbolt Explorer Post 315-X held recently in the Moose Hall, was a lecture and native Indian Clay and was served by mothers of the scouts.

The 18-year-old Thunderbolt is a Crow Indian from a Cheyenne tribe in Montana. His father was named Thunderbolt Hunt Left Hand and his grandfather was Thunderbolt Kill Left Hand.

The lecture given by Thunderbolt was historical and dealt with the battle of the Little Big Horn, in which his grandfather, then 17, was second in command to Chief Crazy Horse and Chief Rain-in-the-Face during Custer's last stand.

AN ADVENTURE story was told by Thunderbolt in Indian sign language, followed by a question and answer period. He also exhibited deerskin leggings worn by his grandfather and a pair of beaded moccasins depicting the historic story of the famous battle.

Several members of the troops and their fathers took part in a mock scalping and two Explorer Scouts from the Order of the Arrow, George Pepp, Post 202-X Life Scout, and Gary Rickard, Post 315-X Eagle Scout holding Palm awards, accompanied the famous Indian in a number of his tribal dances.

CHIEF THUNDERBOLT was a delegate to Congress for four years and danced for President Truman while in Washington. At this time he presented the former president with a "Crazy Dog necklace" the highest honor a chief of the Cheyenne Nation can bestow upon a "Great White Father."

He rode in the inauguration parades for both Truman and President Eisenhower.

Chief Thunderbolt Left Hand appeared in the motion pictures "The Big Sky," "Tomahawk," "Buffalo Bill," and "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon."

WHILE IN EUROPE with 18 members of his tribe, Chief Thunderbolt danced for Queen Elizabeth of England and presented Prince Charles with a white buckskin jacket. During his European trip he also
